

What is the Great North Care Record?

Great North Care Record gives the staff caring for you a more complete picture of your medical history.

It does this by making information held about you in different places such as your GP practice or local hospital available to the staff who are looking after you.

Being able to access this information helps make your care safer.

How does it work?

Your GP, local hospital, social care, community or mental health team all hold different electronic records about you. This means your complete health and care record is like a jigsaw puzzle, with the pieces held in different places. This is probably why you have been asked the same questions over and over again by different staff. We know it can be frustrating having to repeat the same information.

The Great North Care Record joins the pieces of the puzzle together and allows health and care professionals to see a more complete picture. Reducing the need for you to repeat information.

Health and care staff can spend a lot of their time contacting different teams to find out more about you. With the Great North Care Record, they can access this vital medical information at the touch of a button, and then provide you with the most appropriate care.

The Great North Care Record operates in the North East of England and North Cumbria and covers the 3.6 million people living in our region. It provides a 'view only' display of your medical record, which can be accessed by staff involved in your care.

How does this help me?

- Health and care staff have more time to provide you with better, safer care
- Information about you is available quickly
- You will be asked to repeat less information

What kind of information is made available?

The type of information viewed includes details like:

- Contact details
- Appointments

- Diagnoses
- Allergies
- Referrals
- Test results
- Immunisations
- Vital signs

Are all NHS and social care organisations in the North East and North Cumbria able to access my information?

Staff working in hospitals, GPs, mental health, out of hours, ambulance and adult social care in our region are able to access the Great North Care Record.

How do I know my records are kept safe?

By law, everyone working in, or on behalf of the NHS and social care, must respect your privacy and keep all information about you safe. The Great North Care Record uses a secure system that meets NHS and social care security standards. The system keeps an audit trail including the time and date when your record is accessed. If you have access to your patient record through a GP app you will be able to see this information. You can also contact our helpline and they can check.

The laws on data protection are clear and we take them very seriously. Organisations who use the Great North Care Record are responsible for ensuring only the right people access your record and have strict policies and protocols in place to prevent inappropriate access.

Who can amend or add information to my Great North Care Record?

Great North Care Record provides 'view only' access to your medical record. There is no change to current practice. Your records can only be amended within local GP, social care or hospital systems.

The Great North Care Record simply displays this information more widely across the health and social care system to staff who are caring for you.

Can anyone see my records?

No, your records are confidential. They can only be lawfully looked at by staff who are directly involved in your care. Doctors, nurses and other care staff rely on good communication with their patients - and with each other - to provide the best care possible.

Your information isn't available to anyone who doesn't need it to provide treatment, care and support to you. Your details are kept safe and won't be made public, passed on to a third party who is not directly involved in your care, used for advertising or sold.

Can I access my medical records?

Yes. The Data Protection Act 2018 allows you to find out what information is held about you, on computer and in certain manual records. This is known as 'right of subject access' and applies to your health and social care records. If you want to see or receive a copy of your records speak to a member of staff, or your care providers who will be able to help you. You can also access your GP record using a number of different apps, including the NHS App.
